

HONOR MEMORY OF LUMBERMAN ON ANNIVERSARY

Students and Faculty of Augustana College in Tribute to Benefactor.

Tribute to the memory of Frederick C. A. Denkmann, pioneer lumberman of Rock Island whose 100th birthday anniversary is today, was paid him by teachers, students and Dr. G. A. Andreen, president of Augustana college, "not only for the wonderful gift to the college, but for a life of high ideals and of masterful accomplishment."

In these words Dr. Andreen at the commemorative service held in the Augustana chapel and the Chippewa cemetery yesterday afternoon honored Mr. Denkmann. In a beautiful description of the life of Mr. and Mrs. Denkmann in those early days of settlement in the Augustana college was established by their children, Dr. Andreen recalled that the lumberman came to America the same year three founder of Augustana college came to Rock Island.

The chapel program to which 300 students and teachers gathered began at 2 o'clock, was:

Organ prelude—A. Cyril Graham. Song—Audience.

Scripture reading—Dr. G. A. Brandelle.

"Saviour, I Follow On"—Orlando club.

Memorial address—Dr. G. A. Andreen.

"Awake My Soul"—Orlando club.

Tribute of student body—Roy Johnson.

Song—Audience.

Following the services in the chapel, 250 students and teachers proceeded to the mausoleum in Chippewa cemetery where Dr. C. E. Lindberg gave a short address and the Augustana male quartet sang.

Dr. Andreen in his talk at the chapel said in part:

"A hundred years ago on April 8, 1822, a son was born in a home in Salzwedel, Germany, to whom was given the name Frederick Carl August. These early years were historically part of the struggles for liberation and unification of this central part of Europe which for centuries had been going on both in the political world and the religious world. About this time took place some of the titanic wars which characterized the age of Napoleon, which was brought disaster to the affairs of many a household throughout Europe, and affected also that of Didrick Denkmann, the father of Carl. Later on the storms of 1848 rocked the very foundations of society. The reports of the opponents in the new world had reached the ears and attracted the attention of the young man Denkmann. In 1849 he crossed the ocean to help build up that America which was growing strong and mighty, not least by the addition of men of brain and brawn from old mother Europe."

"Thus Mr. Denkmann arrived here in America the same year that Prof. L. P. Esbjorn, the founder of Augustana college and theological seminary, came to this city. In his settlement of Rock Island and Moline and the country round about. One of the first and best things that Mr. Denkmann did here in America was to found a home, and in Miss Katherine Bladell he met a life companion, who brought love and joy to the home of Mr. Denkmann."

"In 1851 we find Mr. and Mrs. Denkmann living in Moline and later on moving to Rock Island, where they spent the remainder of a long, active, useful life. In 1860 Mr. Denkmann with his brother-in-law, Fred Weyerhaeuser, laid the foundation of the lumber business which has brought so many millions of feet of lumber in immense rafts to Rock Island, and distributed them as prepared material into tens of thousands of homes here and all through the neighboring states."

Coincidence Continues.

"By another inscrutable coincidence this firm began its successful career the same year that Augustana college was founded, 1860, which institution had been located for awhile in other parts of the state, namely Chicago and Easton, and was finally for various reasons attracted to Rock Island, thus becoming a neighbor of Mr. Denkmann, and little by little attracting the interest of the family to its work."

"After more than 50 years of residence in Rock Island, Mr. Denkmann passed away in 1905, and in 1907 Mrs. Denkmann was called to her reward."

"On this centennial day we think of Mr. Denkmann as one of the leading figures in the history of Rock Island, and of the development of this part of our commonwealth. He came here when the country was young, in a great measure still uninhabited, when the forest was growing on the northern hills ready to be molded into material for homes. Nor were the spiritual interests neglected. He and his wife laid deep in the hearts of their children the foundations of religion, of noble character, of estimable performances, and of splendid service to the country which is theirs and to the community to which they belong. On this centennial we honor the memory of F. C. A. Denkmann, not only for the wonderful gift which has been erected to his memory, but above all for a life of high ideals and of masterful accomplishment."

DISMISS THREE CASES AGAINST EXPOSITION CO.

Suits Pending Since 1915 Are Ruled Out on Motions Made by Defense.

Three of six law suits that developed as a result of the falling of the tower in Exposition park, July 5, 1915, during an Independence day celebration, were stricken from the circuit court records this morning by Judge N. A. Larson. Otto C. Seidlitz and the Exposition Park company stockholders were named as defendants in the suits.

The case in which H. R. Klausch was plaintiff, the only one of the six in which trial was ever started, was dismissed for failure of the plaintiff to comply with an order of court to file bond covering costs. The dismissal was made on motion of C. E. Dietz, attorney for the defendants.

The other two cases dismissed were those of R. Lee Crandall and Alden B. Benson, a minor, by Peter Benson. Crandall was held to be a non-resident. Motion in the Benson case set forth that security for costs had not been filed.

Counsel for the defendants also secured an order abating suit as to John D. Beecher, deceased, and John D. Beecher, trustees. The case now stands against Otto C. Seidlitz alone. Damage asked is $10,000.

Other cases pending are those of Josephine Chinnberg and Alice Mundy.

The Klausch case came to trial in circuit court in January, 1921. The trial was partly finished when the defense presented a motion to the court for the plaintiff to file security for costs. Klausch was given until a certain day in which to comply with the order. The case was continued and the jury dismissed.

All suits are based upon the same facts. The tower, a steel structure, collapsed under weight of spectators who used it as a place of vantage in viewing an airplane and auto race program. A number were injured.
